

Our 11 Favorite Places to Find Deals and Discounts on Triathlon Gear!
Complements of CompleteTri.

General Triathlon Gear

REI is a well-known distributor of tri and cycling gear, but the real deals can be found at their clearance site, REI Garage. What is on sale constantly changes and available sizes can vary, but deals of 25% to 50% off are common. It is worth checking in each week, and our readers can get an additional 25% off many products by using our link.

TriSports.com is another great source of tri gear, but the real deals are on their clearance page, here. The typical deal is 35% to 55% off, but the brands that are on sale are constantly changing, so check back often. TriSports is usually a nice option for tri-specific gear and cycling equipment.

Wetsuits and Swimming

Xterra is a leading retailer of high-end triathlon wetsuits. Xterra only sells direct through their website. We negotiated a discount for our readers, so apply the code “Ebook” for discounts of 20% - 50% on many of your purchases.

Blueseventy, along with Xterra, is the other top triathlon wetsuit maker in the market that we have been fans of for years. They don't do discounts often, but on occasion they will put some items up on sale for just a week or two. When they offer a sale, no code is needed. Their discount section can be hard to find, so use this link to get right to it.

SwimOutlet is a great place to find equipment and supplies such as goggles, jammers, swimsuits, and training props. The trick is to navigate to their deep discount section, where everything is 50% off or more. We will save you the hassle, you can get right to it, here.

Cycling

Performance Bike has a great outlet store, which we particularly like for bike components and wheels. Timing is everything, but it is common to find higher-end Zipp or Mavic wheels at 50% off or more. In addition, they typically have a nice selection of discount cranksets, if you are looking to do some component upgrades or need a replacement. Find the Performance Bike Outlet here.

Jenson USA has a Sale section, but then within that they have a Gear Clearance section which is where the real deals can be found. It reminds us of some of the now-defunct deep-discount cycling gear sites, where quality clearance bike gear can be had while it lasts. Take a peek each week or so, as the stock is always changing. Find it here.

Fitness Gear Niches

Sierra Trading Post is a discount outdoor gear site who sells a lot more than just workout gear, but we find them to offer good deals on running gear and occasionally on closeout wetsuits. Since they sell so many different things, you have to dig a bit to find the workout gear. Sierra also extends a discount to our readers; by following this link, you can get an additional 20% off orders of $100 or more.

Many Amazon products are sold by sellers who are highly motivated to get honest reviews on their products. If you have your eye on a triathlon product sold through an Amazon retailer, consider reaching out and asking for a deep discount in return for your honest review. You might be surprised how many take you up on it.

Offline Discount Sources

Most local bike shops facilitate bike swaps in the spring and sometimes in the fall. This is a great way to pick up a quality used bike at a decent price. As you can imagine, you will need to get there early to snag higher-end bikes before others do. Be sure to get to follow your LBS on facebook or twitter to stay up-to-date on the swap dates.

Finally, joining a local triathlon club can have many training and fellowship benefits, but one underappreciated benefit is the discounts provided by local tri shops, bike shops, and health clubs for tri club members. Consider joining, and you may be surprised by your access to excellent deals on high quality gear, many of which are standing discounts that can be taken at any time. Most cities and universities have at least one good tri club to choose from.

Are we missing anyone? If so, drop us a line and we will consider them for inclusion. We would love to hear your secret spots for finding great tri-related deals!
